What's a Law Worth

When It Interferes

With Privacy?

Democratic Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois announced yesterday he will call up the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill in the Senate next week—but I have inside information which causes me to say the measure won't pass, either next week or ever.

While the chief opposition to such legislation centers in the South there have been recent developments in the North calculated to cool off enthusiasm for FEPC. That perennial candidate for president, Governor Thomas E. Dewey, sponsored a little FEPC law in New York state—and the underground story is that instead of opening up new jobs for all people it has cooled off the public appetite for compulsory laws. Under FEPC, it appears, anyone who gets "fired" claims it was due to race or religion—in an effort to make the law an umbrella covering all kinds of inefficiency and incompatibility.

Of course, as long as payrolls are met with private funds anyone who protests to a state or federal law to protect him from being "fired" is going to need a lawyer.

The whole idea of FEPC is a rank invasion of the rights of the private citizen—and the South doesn't skip saying so. The pity of it is that the South's position would be a whole lot stronger on the FEPC question if it had consistently defended the right of privacy instead of straying off on such dictatorial policies as prohibition.

As matters now stand we have this paradox: The South says it's all right to fix by law what you may drink or eat or wear, but all wrong to fix by law the terms of private employment, while the North, jealous of its right to take a private drink, sees no inconsistency in sticking its nose into the payroll records of privately-owned factories.

What I think about the South's prohibition dictatorship isn't going to change Southern opinion all at once, any more than what the South thinks is going to temper the enthusiasm of Northern zealots for "law and more law" on the race question.

But time is eternal, and experience resolves all matters.

And when that day comes the Southerner will move his drink out in public, the Northerner will mind his own business, and congressmen will do something about the cost of government instead of wasting their time windjamming about laws that couldn't be enforced even if they were enacted.

AFL Stages Its Biggest Free Show

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP)—The AFL put on display today what it calls "the biggest free show ever staged anywhere."

Here are some of the things the expected 500,000 visitors will see: Two sides of beef cut up and given away to the public every day for a week.

The nose-piece and pilot's section of the air force's new jet bomber, the B-45.

A navy radion-controlled racing car whipping about an enclosure. Ten electric stoves assembled every day.

A bricklaying contest, open to all challengers, amateur and professional.

Guided missiles and the latest in military mechanics.

The manufacture of television sets and tubes.

A cross-section of a movie theater in operation.

It's all part of the AFL-sponsored fifth annual industries show at Convention Hall. AFL President William Green opens the exhibit to the public at noon. It will run until next Friday.

The AFL put on a preview for newsmen today and pointed to the millions of dollars worth of exhibits (no one would estimate the exact figure) and called them "the biggest show of labor-management cooperation ever held."

The union, the armed forces, various manufacturers and distributors pooled their resources to create the exhibits. It took a year to organize and assemble everything in the huge expanses of Convention Hall.

"You could put any big industrial show, including the Leipzig Fair, in one corner of Convention Hall," said an AFL spokesman.

The Leipzig fair is the Soviet-sponsored industrial display held in the Russian zone of Germany.

Probers to Study Files on Loyalty

Washington, May 6 (AP)—Senate Communist investigators hope to get started Monday on a study of state department loyalty files made available by President Truman.

The files to be examined by the senate foreign relations subcommittee cover 81 persons cited by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis) as either Communists, fellow travelers or otherwise had security risks.

McCarthy reportedly is planning to blast the administration tonight for releasing only the state department records on those cases to the committee, which is investigating his charges that a lot of Communists and Red sympathizers have infiltrated the department.

He has insisted that the inquiry group must have access to FBI files as well.

McCarthy told reporters he would have plenty to say regarding the files issue in a speech tonight before a convention of midwestern young Republicans in Chicago. A nationwide radio broadcast (ABC) of his address is scheduled (7:30 p. m., EST).

Mr. Truman at first refused to let the senate committee have a look at any government loyalty files. Two days ago he agreed to make state department data—but not FBI files—available in the 81 cases which McCarthy outlined to the senate last Feb. 20.

Hartman Teacher Named Head of State AEA

Little Rock, May 6 (AP)—Miss Ocie Bivins of Hartman will assume office July 1 as third woman president in history of the Arkansas Education Association.

Her election was announced yesterday after AEA members balloted by mail.

Miss Pearl Middlebrook of Little Rock was the other nominee. She and Miss Bivins were nominated at the AEA convention here March 30.

The late Miss Anne Griffey of Little Rock was president in 1924. In the early 1900's the late Dr. Ida Joe Brooks, also of Little Rock, was president.

Miss Bivins, AEA vice president for the last year, is high school principal at Hartman. She succeeds Silas Snow of Crossett.

Other officers include: Allen Lynch, Tyrone, vice president; Miss Nannie Mae Roney, Pine Bluff, corresponding secretary; Ralph Hazlip, Paragould, and Horace Williamson, El Dorado, new directors.

You Can't Arrest a Man as a Coward When He Has Faced Gunfire Many, Many Times

War stages strange dramas, as witness this story which I got as correspondent from British second army headquarters in Cassel, Flanders, during the bloody fighting of 1917.

The first gray streaks which heralded a sunless dawn were just beginning to rear themselves mushroom-like into the sky from the far off edge of the stinking sea of Flanders mud.

Down to the south of Ypres salient in this cockpit of Europe, the British front line trench along a stretch of perhaps five miles was manned by tight lipped, silent soldiers. They crouched beneath the parapet, waiting for the signal to "go over the top." The zero hour was almost there.

Within the trench was silence, but out in front of them and just in back of them, there was the ceaseless crash of splintering metal as the great enemy shells sought their hidden targets. Overhead, too, a steady stream of British projectiles screamed towards the German defenses.

A tiny bit more light was all they needed. Then would come the British barrage, a curtain of bursting steel, behind which Tommy Atkins would make his way blindly across no man's land to do or die.

The broad shoulders of Captain "John" hunched against the trench among his lads. His eyes were on the illuminated dial of his wrist watch, counting off the seconds. His men saw the big fellow standing there as they had seen him many times before, outwardly calm and steady. It gave a chap courage just to look at him.

But Captain John was far from being calm as he appeared. He was waging a mighty battle with himself as he stood there counting. Something queer had come over him, something he never had experienced before. His nerves were playing havoc with him. He, the hero of a hundred fights, was afraid. His body quivered with the fear of being afraid.

Came the great moment. Captain John raised his hand, and with a cry of relief his men swarmed over the top. But the captain didn't move. He just slumped weakly against the wall of the trench. The sergeant major's quick eye caught the situation. He rushed over and asked:

"What's the matter, sir? Get hit?"

The captain shook his head and muttered:

"I just can't make it, sergeant major. My nerve is gone."

The sergeant major bared his teeth. He didn't like the captain—and he reported the affair to headquarters.

The assistant provost marshal of Cassel tucked the order for arrest into his tunic pocket. It meant a trip to the front line to arrest a man—a court martial!

A. P. M. didn't like his job. It was a captain this time, too—a Captain John. A pity, that.

The sergeant major guided the A. P. M. along the trench and finally pointed out a broad back down the line, with the remark:

"There's your man, sir."

The A. P. M. walked over and tapped the captain on the shoulder, with an "I've come for you."

The big fellow turned and faced the provost. The latter's eyes encountered first the captain's chest, and there they rested in amazement, for strung across the war-strained tunic was a row of ribbons, won for valor in battle. There were medals from the British, the French, the Belgians—each a tribute to bravery.

"I beg your pardon," said the A. P. M., "but I've made a mistake."

"Oh no haven't," replied the captain. "I'm your man."

mustache and glowered at the young officer, whom he long had known and liked. Then, as I got the report, the "conversation" ran about like this:

"Dammit all, man, don't stand there like an Egyptian mummy," growled the colonel. "Sit down and try to look intelligent. What's all this, anyway? They tell me you're afraid of Germans. That so—what?"

"I—that is—yes, sir," replied the unhappy captain. "I refused to go over the top."

"Refused, dammit, refused?" roared the colonel. "Why, there isn't any such word in the king's English, you young blighter. You're a soldier, not a blithering lexicographer feller."

Captain John opened his mouth to speak.

"Quiet sir," snapped the colonel. "I'm talking. What really was the matter, anyway. You've been over the top a hundred times. Old tummy give out on you? Nerves just sort of snap?"

"That's it. Had it myself plenty of times. Funny what a stomach will do to a feller, what? Leaves him without warning sometimes. And dammit, a man can't fight without a stomach. It isn't done, what?"

The colonel scowled fiercely, and added a word:

"That's all. You may go. They need you back in the trenches."

"Better stop at LaBelle Sauvage (the Cassel village inn) for twenty-four hours though and get rested up. Have some good food. Laugh. And next time you're on leave, drop in and see me."

Citizens Search for Man Who Shot Crippled Veteran

Philadelphia, May 6 (AP)—Citizens of Philadelphia—2,000,000 strong—have been alerted in the search for the accused slayer of James J. Donohoe, the wounded war veteran who became a policeman because he needed an outside job for his health.

Patrolman Donohoe was shot twice as he attempted to seize a suspect in a 26-cent holdup of a window cleaning establishment on Wednesday morning. Donohoe, the father of a two-year-old daughter, died in Jefferson hospital several hours later.

Inspector Richard A. Doyle said the entire police department is on the lookout for Albert Nicholas Gnatz, 55-year-old convict recently paroled. And, said Doyle, we have appealed to all the city's citizens to act as unofficial detectives.

Acheson Calls for Rally of Free Nations

Washington, May 6 (AP) Secretary of State Acheson, leaving for Europe, called on the nations of the West today to rally their forces with "utmost vigor" to meet the global challenge of communism.

"Free men and free nations everywhere will face increasingly crucial tests in the years immediately ahead," Acheson declared in a talkoff statement.

He statement was given out by the state department in advance of his takeoff time of 1 p. m. (EST).

The aim was to emphasize the hopes he holds of increasing unity of the Western powers in diplomatic conferences in London during the next two weeks.

Acheson was scheduled to reach Paris tomorrow morning for talks with French Foreign Minister Schuman, and to continue to London Tuesday.

After declaring that the immediate future will bring "increasingly crucial tests" in the Communist struggle Acheson added:

"What we seek at London is to accelerate mobilization of the moral and material strength of the free world. The free world contains vast untapped moral and material resources. We must develop those reserves to the best of our ability. We should be doing so even if international communism did not exist. As things are we must do so with utmost vigor."

Once-Fabulous Virginia City Now Gets Most of Its Gold From Many Visiting Tourists

By HAL BOYLE

Virginia City, Mont.—(AP)—Justice isn't blind any more in this one time rip-roaring mining camp, but the justice of the peace is.

He is "Blind Bob" Gohn, who also operates a tavern and general store here and believes he is the only sightless bartender in the west.

"I never heard of any others," he said, deftly mixing a highball. "I lost my eyes here in the mines back in 1920. I got blasted."

"Blind Bob," a pleasant voiced man of 50, is full of the lore of Montana's most famous gold mining camp.

"They took 300 to 500 million dollars out of Alder Gulch here nobody knows just how much," he said. "And there's still plenty of gold here." Lately however, the Gulch probably hasn't produced as much gold as the pockets of visiting tourists.

Virginia City, once boisterous with 10,000 to 20,000 miners, was quietly rotting into just another ghost town of a fabulous past until a wealthy rancher, Charles Bovey, decided to restore its vanished flavor.

Bovey has been gradually rebuilding the town into a showplace of the Old West, combining the areas for authentic historical relics.

"Last year we had about 100,000 tourists," said Blind Bob.

He, the grandson of George Gohn, who came here a few days after gold was first discovered in 1863. His pioneer grandfather was a member of the original committee in vigilantes who brought law and order into Montana territory at the end of a rope.

Storm Leaves 7 Dead, 100 Injured

By The United Press
Winds of hurricane strength roared into their third day of destruction today, leaving seven dead, more than 100 injured and millions of dollars in property damage as they headed toward Canada.

The weather bureau said the winds would start dying down shortly after dawn but warned that they still had a dangerous punch.

The storm center, which roared up the Mississippi Valley from Texas, was located near the border. But winds up to 100 miles an hour rotated in a giant vortex more than 500 miles wide.

Behind it, the storm left a trail of wreckage caused by tornadoes, thunderstorms and "baby" blizzards generated from its towering thunderheads.

The giant storm was born over the southern plains where drought was already worrying farmers.

As it sped northward, it carried dust from the southland as far north as Traverse City, Mich., where visibility was reduced to one mile.

Some of the injuries and damage were caused by spectacular lightning storms. But most deaths were caused directly by the powerful winds or by twisters.

Corporation Profits in Upward Trend

By The Associated Press
New York, May 6 (AP)—Profits of American corporations in the first quarter of this year show a strong upward trend from a year ago.

A compilation made today by the Associated Press of 508 corporations in all fields of business and industry show first quarter profits were six per cent ahead of the first quarter of 1949.

That earnings power came despite cut-backs in postwar expansion programs, general price reductions, and strikes.

It was due in great part to the wide demand for automobiles and television sets by the public and to industry's need for chemicals, the raw materials that go into a long list of products.

In this year's first quarter profits of the 508 companies amounted to $1,402,793,143 as compared with $1,326,901,330 a year ago.

Gala Reception Given Young Newlyweds

Beverly Hills, Calif., May 6 (AP)—Elizabeth Taylor and Conrad (Nick) Hilton, Jr., head to the thence to a reception featuring carved-ice statues of doves, kissing and a horn of plenty spilling fruit.

There'll also be a big bustle of beautiful, 18-year-old film star and her 23-year-old hotelier bridegroom leave on a honeymoon that will include three months in Europe.

About 20 M-G. Mand Beverly Hills policemen were assigned to handle the thousands of fans expected to gather outside the Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd.

Rope barriers were ready to be erected if needed to hold them in check.

The candle-lit ceremony, the movie capital's wedding of the year, was set for 5 p. m.

Elizabeth planned a quiet day, following what her mother called a small dinner at the Taylor home last night. She added, "we've been going around in circles. It's certainly been hectic."

A re-check of seating accommodations at the wedding rehearsal Thursday night indicated that it will be possible to squeeze in all 700 invited guests.

About 200 persons are invited to the reception following at the Bel-Air Country club. In each of three dining rooms will be an eight-foot round table bearing an ice carving, each with an electric light inside.

Democrats Hail Truman's Five Point Program

Washington, May 6 (AP)—The five-point program submitted by President Truman to big small businessmen drew high praise today from senate Democrats and sharp criticism from Senate Wherry (R-Neb.).

The program, sent to congressmen special message late yesterday, calls for government insurance loans to small business and creation of investment companies to make long term loans.

It got a cool reception in New York banking circles. There were small business groups.

Senator Lucas (D-Ill.) Maybank (D-SC), and Sparks (D-Ala.) who were informed in advance of the President's proposals, called them sound and constructive.

They said they would push action at this session of congress. Maybank, chairman of the banking hearings on the proposals not later than June 1.

Senator Humphrey (D-Minn.) member of the new special senate small business committee, said Mr. Truman's program "charts a course of action that has long been needed and that will offer hope and incentive to the American economy."

But Wherry, the senate Republican leader, said small business men want less government, lower taxes and less interference by government in their business.

"Mr. Truman's five point program for putting the government in business shows that the President is still as far from understanding the problems of small business as he was last year, asking a return to price controls," Wherry said in a statement.

Raps British in Handling Fuchs Case

Washington, May 6 (AP)—The senators assailed Great Britain today for withholding cooperation from the United States in the Klaus Fuchs atomic spying case.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo.), a member of the senate house atomic committee, told a reporter he is shocked at reports that Britain has agreed to give the FBI only limited opportunity to question Fuchs, convicted of passing atomic secrets along to Soviet agents.

Senators Bridges (R-Neb.) and Ferguson (R-Mich.) said information the FBI might get from Fuchs may be vital to defense plans and to the North Atlantic pact and should not be denied this country.

There has been no official statement under which FBI agents talk to Fuchs—an arrangement the FBI is said to regard as adequate if it is to get at the bottom of the atomic spying system.

A senator who asked that name not be used publicly, even these unsatisfactory arrangements were not agreed to by British except under pressure exerted by high American officials.

Montana Governor Case Mystery

Billings, Miss., May 6 (AP)—Montana's Governor John W. Bonner says "there is something mysterious" about a report from New Orleans that he was jailed there for drunkenness.

Enroute here to speak before the Interstate Oil Compact commission meeting, Bonner stopped over in New Orleans Thursday night.

New Orleans Police Capt. Joseph Guillot said he arrested a man in the French quarter who identified himself as "Gov. John Bonner" and produced credentials to that effect. The man was booked on a charge of simple drunk and, as in the practice in New Orleans, was held six hours then released without trial.

When the man was released early yesterday morning he told a photographer "I just did some drinking, like a lot of visitors, and I had too much."

Later Gov. Bonner telephoned the Associated Press in Helena, Mont., and said the stories were "grossly exaggerated" and that he believed it was "a practical joke."

Here he told newsmen "the whole damn thing was a bunch of foolishness." He declined to elaborate.

A few hours after the incident, the governor appeared here, 80 miles east of New Orleans, and addressed the oil commission.

Bonner, a Democrat, began a four-year term in January, 1948.

Cheaper by the Dozen Opens Here Sunday

Last year the hilarious best-seller which had all the nation laughing, "Cheaper by the Dozen," the true story of a wonderful American family, has this year been brought to the screen in Technicolor by Twentieth Century-Fox with Clifton Webb, Jeanne Crain and Myrna Loy in the leading roles.

Coming to the Saenger theatre on Sunday, the movie aims to reproduce the bright and unaffected chronicle of the adventures of a family of twelve children as told in the famous book by two of the twelve, Frank B. Gilbreth, Jr., and Ernestine Gilbreth Carey.

Confirmed bachelor Clifton Webb takes a rest from Belvedere to play "Dad," who, the authors say, "had enough gall to be divided in three parts."

Fresh from an outstanding triumph in Darryl F. Zanuck's "Pinky," Jeanne Crain returns to light comedy in a role similar to her portrayals in "Merrill" and "Apartment for Peggy."

For Myrna Loy, "Cheaper by the Dozen" is her first movie after a sixteen-month sojourn in Paris working for UNESCO.

Walter Lang, who had such great success with "Sitting Pretty," directed the film for producer LaMar Trotti, who also adapted the screenplay from the Gilbreth-Carey original.

Among the featured players are redheaded Betty Lynn, Fred MacMurray's daughter in "Father Was a Fullback," Edgar Buchanan, in the role of a doctor who removes the family's tonsils en masse, Barbara Bates, last seen opposite Danny Kaye in "The Inspector General," Mildred Natwick, and Sara Allgood.

Answer: I commend you for considering the girl's side of the matter as well as your own. Most of the men whose attentions are without intentions are concerned solely with their own getaway and never give a thought to the harm they have done to the girl.

Of course, girls whose affections have been trifled with, as the old phrase goes, do not die of broken hearts. But their faith in men has been slain. The glamour of romance, the joy, the thrills of love are gone from them forever. It is a terrible thing for a man to rob a girl of these and to fill her heart so full of love for him that there will never be room in it for any other man.

Consider also how unfair a deal you are giving a girl when you blight her chances of making a good marriage when you do not mean to marry her yourself. You know that if you take up all of her time and attention, if you are seen out with her everywhere, that you keep other men away from her because they naturally assume that you are engaged to her.

You may say that you have been honest and fair with the girl, that you have told her that your attentions are merely platonic, but no woman will believe a man when he tells her that when he also keeps on coming to see her. The woman in love is the most optimistic fool in the world. The only honorable thing for man to do when he finds a girl is falling in love with him and he does not return her affection, is to keep away from her. Force her to realize that her case is hopeless. Let her find some new boy friend and give her a chance to marry and be happy.

Dear Miss Dix: Is it possible for a woman to be in love with two men at the same time? I love my husband. He is a wonderful man and a good provider and I have been very happy with him, but he is not the romantic type, thinks I should take his love for granted, while I am just the opposite type, very sentimental, crave affection. Now I have fallen in love with another man, who is exciting and thrilling. Of course, I know my place is with man who takes me for granted. Has my husband failed me in not trying to keep our love alive? How can I keep this other love from growing deeper? I have no children.

Distant Star

"Yes, Importantly. Sit down, please." Clemency sat on a chair next to the table, her eyes on Syrie's face as the other remained standing.

SYRIE burst out: "I could kill Jon! Of course I felt sure that he would make mischief. He has made himself crazy with jealousy of Piers."

"Before I met Jon, yes," Syrie nodded. "But that was long ago. And—whatever has been between us is finished and done with. I wish you would understand that."

"That Piers brought him here because he wanted you near him," Syrie said. "Saying the thing made it worse—that was possible. 'Is that true?' she heard herself asking."

"Listen," Syrie urged. "I came here to try to make you believe how little it all mattered. It's been over and finished with for a long time. I hated you—but I know I've got to give him up to you. He loves you—really. You're a new beginning for him."

Every carefully chosen sentence—those sentences which seemed to come so spontaneously—struck a fresh knife into her listener's heart. "My dear," she said, her great eyes suddenly filling with tears. "men are—men! I suppose I was really to blame. After all, I married Jon; but you don't know how sickening he is. how weak. And Piers—Oh! I suppose I ought to have insisted on going away; but—no know what it means to love Piers?"

woman does over a major operation. Then every woman is born with the subtle conviction that every man is a money-maker just because he uses the masculine persuasion. That is the reason girls marry in the reckless way they do, without ever taking the trouble to find out whether their prospective husbands have a dollar in the bank, or a job, or any way whatever to support a family. And not even having to earn the bread and butter herself and finding out that he is a visionary dreamer with the money sense of a white rabbit shakes her faith.

Another queer idea that women have is that men don't feel about their family and friends as they do. A woman would be perfectly shocked if, when she got married, her husband forced her father and sisters and brothers, and to part from all of her girl friends and only meet them on the six now and then down town. Why, she couldn't be that disloyal. She couldn't do anything that would hurt her own people who have been so tender and kind to her all her life.

His Family Unimportant But she doesn't think her husband loves his family as she loves hers. She doesn't think that he is grateful to his mother for all of her devotion and sacrifices, and that he is bound to his brothers and sisters by a thousand ties of affection. She doesn't think he would mind giving up the men who stimulate him and who have stood by him in trouble a hundred times.

It is because brides actually believe their husbands don't care about anybody but themselves that makes so many young wives use every effort to separate their husbands from their mothers and shoulder their old friends out of the house. Practically every home you know is filled up with the wife's friends and the wife's relatives. Husband isn't supposed to want any of his own.

Another queer idea of women is that men enjoy being reformed. No woman likes to be told of her faults, but she cherishes a deathless illusion that a man is simply having the time of his life when his wife is trying to change all of his personal habits and generally cut him over according to her little perforated pattern of what a husband should be.

But queerest of all the ideas that women have about men is that they have no need of tenderness and sympathy and understanding. They labor under the conviction that a man is content to take his wife's love for granted, even when she lavishes all of her affection on the children and gives him none. That he considers it a privilege to be wanted to support a family without anybody even saying "thank you to him. That he is never lonely, never troubled, never would like to have any of the money he earns for himself, never would like to go off with a man friend. And it never occurs to these women that being a man hasn't made him immune to being a human being.

Hot Springs Grand Jury Recesses

Malvern, May 6 (AP).—The Hot Springs county grand jury recessed late yesterday, "subject to call," after returning two indictments on overdraft charges.

Names of the persons indicted were not released, pending their arrests. It is known that none had been indicted previously in the current investigation into alleged gambling and liquor violations in the legally "dry" Hot Springs county.

The investigation began in March. The jury was called back into session Thursday by Circuit Judge Roy Danuser. It indicted Sheriff Ed Deere on 15 counts of false pretense and malfeasance (official misconduct) in connection with alleged falsification of records pertaining to monies drawn for feeding prisoners. Danuser then suspended Deere, who furnished $23,000 bond on the charges.

Black Reportedly Confessed Before Execution Little Rock, May 6 (AP).—The Arkansas Gazette says Thomas E. Black confessed before he died to the rape-slitting for which he was put to death in the Arkansas electric chair.

The newspaper said Black confessed verbally to accellmate, and wrote a final note saying "I was wrong" in the death of nurse Betty Jane McCall in 1948.

According to Robert Lewis Smith, writer Miss McCall's brother in Texarkana, the Black "confessed his guilt to me several times," the Gazette reported. Smith was electrocuted April 28 for the fatal shooting of his former wife.

Black publicly had contended he "blacked out" and remembered nothing of the fatal choking of the nurse in a parked automobile near Little Rock.

The Gazette said it has photostatic copies of both Black's final note and Smith's letter.

Only two members of the Brooklyn Dodgers—Jackie Robinson and Carl Furillo—batter over 300 both at home and on the road last season.

Carl Jeske rolled the fifth highest triplicate in bowling history recently when he scored 247, 247, 247—741 in Milwaukee.
